mo. The Government have shown the greatest hesitation to establish Legations and Consulates in the capitals of Europe, and will only do so eventually by the necessity of such a course being strongly demonstrated to them. Anything that has a tendency to destroy the barriers of exclusiveness which have for so many centuries lodged in the Middle Kingdom like an impenetrable wall, is to them in the highest degree distasteful. Why, then, should Chinese progress so alarm our contemporaries? Does it think that she is likely to turn suddenly into a great military power, and pour countless and conquering hosts upon our Indian empire? Does it imagine that China will coalesce with Russia to secure the sovereignty of Asia? On no other supposition can we account for the assertion that China is moving "only too fast for our peace or security." But there is really no occasion for all this alarm. China is very big and very populous, but she is also comparatively very poor. Another Government is far too feeble to dream of foreign conquest. It has still seemingly more than it can do to extinguish brigandage in the northern provinces and lawlessness in Yunnan; while the aborigines of Formosa are unable to effectually drive the efforts of the imperialists to subdue them. Chinese armies are wretchedly equipped and miserably officered. In Formosa, they have earned a reputation for nothing but the roughest cowardice. Discipline is almost unknown, and of course such a thing as esprit de corps has never been heard of. Their gunboats and coast defences have been greatly exaggerated. The former would not be able to show fight to the smallest English ironclad; the latter would speedily succumb to English guns. It cannot be denied, certainly, that China possesses much raw material in the shape of men, but most of it is of but indifferent quality. Under foreign drill instructors a good deal can be done with the Chinese as far as making them proficient in exercise goes; but it is questionable how they would stand fire, and the still more terrible charge of cold steel. This has yet to be proved. Some have fought bravely no doubt, but in Formosa the Imperial troops exhibited most shameful pusillanimity. A thousand Chinese braves of the present stamp might well be scared from the field by a company of well trained, well armed European troops. Let the Pall Mall Gazette take courage. China is not yet on the war path, and of her own free will, if she is wise, will not for years to come suffer herself to be entangled in a foreign struggle. Her enormous population can barely exist in the most prosperous times; in time of war terrible sufferings must necessarily afflict the poorer classes of the people. It will, we think, taking all circumstances into consideration, be long before China is in a position to successfully interfere with the foreign policy of any European nation, much less that of Great Britain. Meantime it is both foolish and fruitless to indulge in alarms and surmises as to her possible future.
